APPENDIX A

ABOUT JOBMARKET MALAYSIA SDN BHD

Jobmarket Malaysia Sdn Bhd is a company that assists its clients (university lecturers and students) in meeting the industries requirements (human capital and internship portal). The mission and vision of Jobmarket is to become the leader in providing quality candidates to companies and employers, to upgrade skills of candidates and our members, to be the global internship portal which helped matched the universities graduates to the industries requirement by providing outstanding service, selection, convenience, value and trustworthy information. Plus, Jobmarket Malaysia operates the first and only internship portal in the country, www.jobmarket.com.my that caters specifically for the undergraduates to undergo internship/practical training. To date, 26 universities and colleges have collaborated with Jobmarket for the Internship program and more than 35, 000 students and fresh graduates have become Jobmarket members.

Jobmarket through its finding from visiting 59 universities and colleges throughout Malaysia, and spoken to more than 665 companies, has identified the reasons for increasing number of unemployed graduates and thereafter make several proposals to the Government via the institutions of higher learning whereby we have noted that some of the proposals have been accepted and implemented by the Government while the others have yet to be accepted. The proposals made, after the study, by Jobmarket are:-

-To lengthen the industrial training period from 3 weeks to 6 months

The then industrial training period was too short and not viable/feasible for the corporate to train the students. The students will not learn much due to such short period. By the time they have sufficient knowledge they had to go back to the universities to continue with their studies. To the corporate, it was a waste of their time, office space and money. Action taken by the Government: compulsory 3 months practical training. To Jobmarket: this is not enough as it should be 6 months and applicable to all faculty (not only certain faculties), for the benefit of the tripartite

-To provide workshops and soft skill training to the students before they undergo their industrial programme

The workshops and soft skill training need to be given to the students prior to their undergoing the industrial training programme. They need to learn how to write resume, attending interview, enhancing their communication skill and dress code and manners etc. They are taught to change their attitude and brought down to earth as working environment is very different from university life. Action taken by the Government: universities were told to conduct workshops and soft skill training to the students.

-To pay allowance to the students while they undergo their industrial training programme

The students were not paid any allowance and this resulted in high absenteeism and the "care-less attitude". Those companies with bad experience refused to take in students but preferred to take in experienced adults. Majority of the students need allowances to pay for their transport and meals. Action taken by the Government: manufacturing companies can claim tax allowance and contributors to HRDF can also claim back the money paid to the students undergoing industrial training in their companies. To Jobmarket: this is not enough as it should cover

ALL business sectors instead in order to make this industrial training programme successful. We hope the Government will extend to ALL business sectors soon.

-To change the industrial training programme from 2nd and 3rd year to the final year, just before their convocation

In an effort to reduce the unemployment rate of fresh graduates, the industrial training programme is encouraged to be at the tail end of the students' studies and exams. This is where the students need to develop their good habits and attitude, e.g. punctuality, commitment and responsibility, hoping that they will be absorbed by the companies by the end of their industrial training programme. The fresh graduates need not have to worry and look for jobs nearing the completion of their industrial training programme and they can continue working with the companies they are attached to, provided there are vacancies in the company and their attitude, commitment and responsibility are good. The companies, on the other hand, can take them as full time staff. They do not need to advertise for positions and can save money on advertisement, training and also time in interviewing candidates.

-To have the industrial training programme running throughout the year instead of semester breaks

This is a demand and supply theory. When the students undergo their industrial training programme during their semester break, there may be a sudden influx of supply and the corporate will not be able to absorb ALL the students. Thus many students will not have the opportunity to undergo their industrial training programme and may be penalized by the universities for non-compliance.

-To have a win-win opportunity for employer and employee

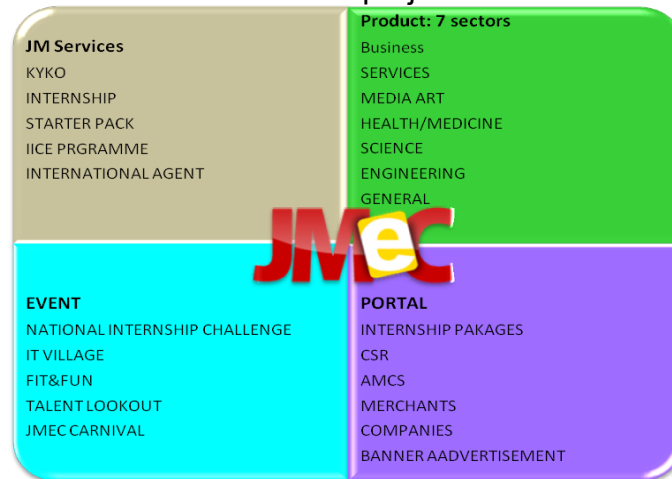

If the company has any project that requires longer or no time frame to complete, they can recruit the students to undertake the project. The cost will be much lower as compared to engaging full time employees or outsourced to third parties. The company will be able to plan and strategize their project and the cost of the project will be reduced considerably. In this way, the project cost will be more competitive and the company can make more money from the project implemented.

About JMEC (JobMarket Entrepreneurship Club)

Apart from the online activities, Jobmarket.com.my also uses the approach of getting students to be involved in more activities and "get their hands dirty" through JMEC (JobMarket Entrepreneurship Club) so that they are more wholesomely groomed. Some of the activities include National Level Internship Challenge, seminars, workshops, club activities etc.

The Vision of JMEC is to encourage more marketable graduates through experiential learning locally, nationally and internationally, via internship and entrepreneurship. JMEC's mission is to develop interest into talent and drive passion. JMEC is launched on 22nd June 28, 2011 by Deputy Minister of Higher Education, Dato Saifuddin Abdullah, and to date, 77 JMEC Uniclubs have been set up at 26 universities/colleges nationwide.

JMEC 21 projects

With our ever growing database of undergraduates and graduates nationwide, Jobmarket is geared to provide this platform to cater for interns nationwide, providing lecturers an additional solution to have better interaction with industries, to enable closer monitoring on interns, and encourage feedback from the companies, mainly to assist in upgrading syllabus to incorporate required technical skills, and to encourage more effective teaching style in improving student's soft skills.

 - Jobmarket is the National Internship Portal that caters specifically and provides the opportunity to the undergraduates to undergo internship or practical training. Our mission is to produce more marketable graduates to meet the industrial requirements. In collaboration with our mission, we had come out with a package that will be beneficial to COMPANIES, LECTURERS and STUDENTS.

-From this initiative, companies may recruit interns according to student's field of study and identify good employee to be retained after their internship. Less training is needed, as long as a structured internship program is in place. Interns can be good resources when you have projects but insufficient manpower, thus gaining short term talent and provide your organization with fresh ideas. You can also allocate tasks according to the intern's strengths as you have access to their KYKO personality test, and their competency trail from JMEC's project achievements. The entire internship process, from sourcing, interviewing, to logbook and internship certificate/testimonial is online at www.jobmarket.com.my. In the package, Jobmarket will collect RM100 for each intern, in which up to 95% are used to fund the JMEC projects, and 5% will be used to maintain the portal.
